The Farm and Food Policy Diversity Initiative is a diverse collaboration of organizations representing people of color farmers, rancher, farm workers and urban food system advocates. It is designed to ensure organizations serving people of color in the food system have the opportunity to link their own initiatives into a comprehensive agenda of food and agriculture policy proposals that allow diverse communities to benefit from the opportunities that other farmers have had for decades and to assure full participation of people of color producers, farm workers and rural and urban communities in the food system. These Priorities were developed in conjunction with the Farm and Food Policy Project.

The Farm and Food Policy Diversity Initiative Policy Team has developed a set of Policy Priorities for the 2007 Farm Bill. We invite your input and feedback on these priorities, and request your organizational support and involvement as we bring these proposals to Congress. Please join us!
